Theme

Geneva High School
Senior Year 1943-1944.

Dear Reader:

The editors have recalled the big things and little things that have happened during this school year. What they mean to you depends on your association. The gay moments of participating in the opera or of watching the Senior play come back to you. The valiant efforts of the teams to play the game live again for you although you see only the pictures of the players and read the scores. You recall the grave and serious moments of class, as well as the lighter moments of hall conversation.

A feeling of gratitude comes over us as the unselfish work of the Junior Red Cross all year long comes to mind. The sharing, both direct and indirect, in the Student Council has given us valuable experience in the way of democratic training.

A famous author, Anatole France, has expressed what a book may mean to a person when he wrote:

"What is a book? A series of little printed signs—essentially only that. It is for the reader to supply himself the forms and colors and sentiments to which these signs correspond . . . Each word in a book is a magic finger that sets a fiber of our brain vibrating like a harpstring and so evokes a note from the sounding board of our soul." . . .

Sincerely,

THE EDITOR.

WE, THE CLASS OF 1944, are proud of the opportunity to dedicate our annual to a true American gentleman, who represents our ideals of dignity, sincerity, loyalty, and tolerance, and who appreciates all the truly good things of life:
culture, friendships, and kindness:

IN MEMORIAM

W. F. O'BRIEN who died August 15, 1943, during his twenty-seventh year as a member of the Board of Education—a man of few words and sound judgment—one generous of his time and faithful to the trust placed in him by the citizens of Geneva.

Congratulations and best wishes to every member of the Senior Class. The demands upon your loyalty and leadership as seniors have been met with enthusiasm and with success. I have confidence in your future.

W. LYNN HOUSEMAN, M.A.

To the Class of 1944:

It is doubted that any class in the history of our High School can parallel your experience. You entered high school at a time when our country was getting ready for the war that most of us realized was inevitable. You became Sophomores just before Pearl Harbor. As Juniors you lived through the year of doubt and disappointment. You leave as Seniors confident that victory will be ours. Through it all, you have stuck to your course, getting ready to do your part as good citizens. To you all, I wish the best that can come to good citizens.

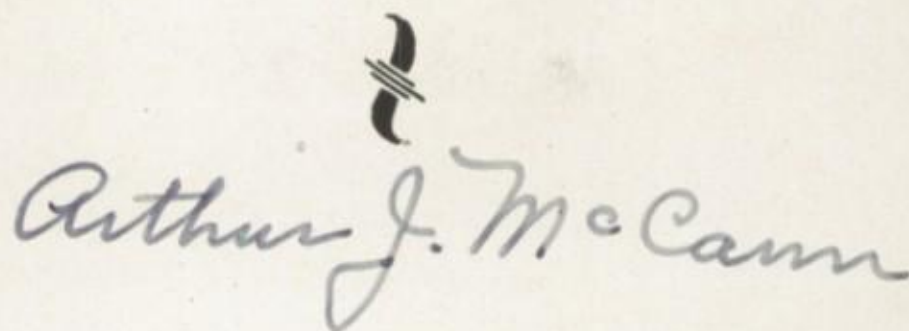

LOUIS M. COLLINS, B.A.
Principal Geneva High School.

Greetings to the Class of 1944:

The best that I can wish for you is that you may always have the same spirit of cooperation, the same desire for success, and the same ability to achieve as has been displayed by this very active class of '44.

Student Council

Had, but that boys have some (ain't it)

(note my line of sight)

An active, intelligent student council is a valuable addition to any high school. By aiding the student in three distinct ways, it tends to make him a better citizen of his home and school and a better member of society.

The student council allows a student to have an active voice in the activities of his school. He feels that he spends a good share of his day in school and, therefore, should have an opportunity to share in its operation. When this opportunity is granted, the students and faculty pull together and the school runs as one, big, happy family. When a student knows that indirectly he has made the rules, he ceases to complain continually about the operation of the school. Later, because of this spirit of cooperation has carried over into the community, the graduates are ready to cooperate and sacrifice for the common good.

By demonstrating governmental practices, the student council acts as a supplement to civic training courses. Everything that is done in connection with the student council is done in a manner similar to that actually practiced in a democracy. Both the student council and the actual government are representative bodies composed of individuals elected by the people. The elections to choose these individuals are carried on with the same fervor and zest in both organizations. After the election has been completed, the representatives suggest improvements in a manner similar to that followed in actual practice. This practical experience in government is valuable to the student because it gives him a glimpse of what is in store for him after high school.

The student council furthers the student's natural abilities, for when the time for the election of a new council rolls around, the entire student body puts its natural abilities on display. Those members who seem to have the abilities the majority expects, are chosen as candidates. After their election, members introduce ideas helpful to the students they represent. In addition, they express opinions on measures brought up by other representatives and to express intelligent opinions the members must develop the ability to think on their feet. A council member must also show fortitude so that he might be able to follow things through to their conclusion.

The student council gives many benefits. First, it teaches cooperation and respect for the other fellow's ideas and feelings. Second, it teaches the fundamentals of democratic government. Third, it develops the natural abilities such as the ability to express ideas intelligently and the ability to stick with a job until it is completed. Fourth, it develops a knack for accepting responsibility squarely. If a person is responsible, he can be depended upon to follow any job through to completion.

EDWARD S. NAGEL, JR.

President Student Council.

The editors have selected a few of the many fields of training for emphasis in this Annual—only a few, for there is a paper shortage and a war (Remember Tojo and Schickelgruber?) We call to your attention:

Administration and Faculty—for their work in guiding us into and through the right courses in this emergency—especially the outstanding work of Miss Margaret Cooney in carrying through the sale of war bonds and stamps.

Total $87,741.90

As of April 5, 1944

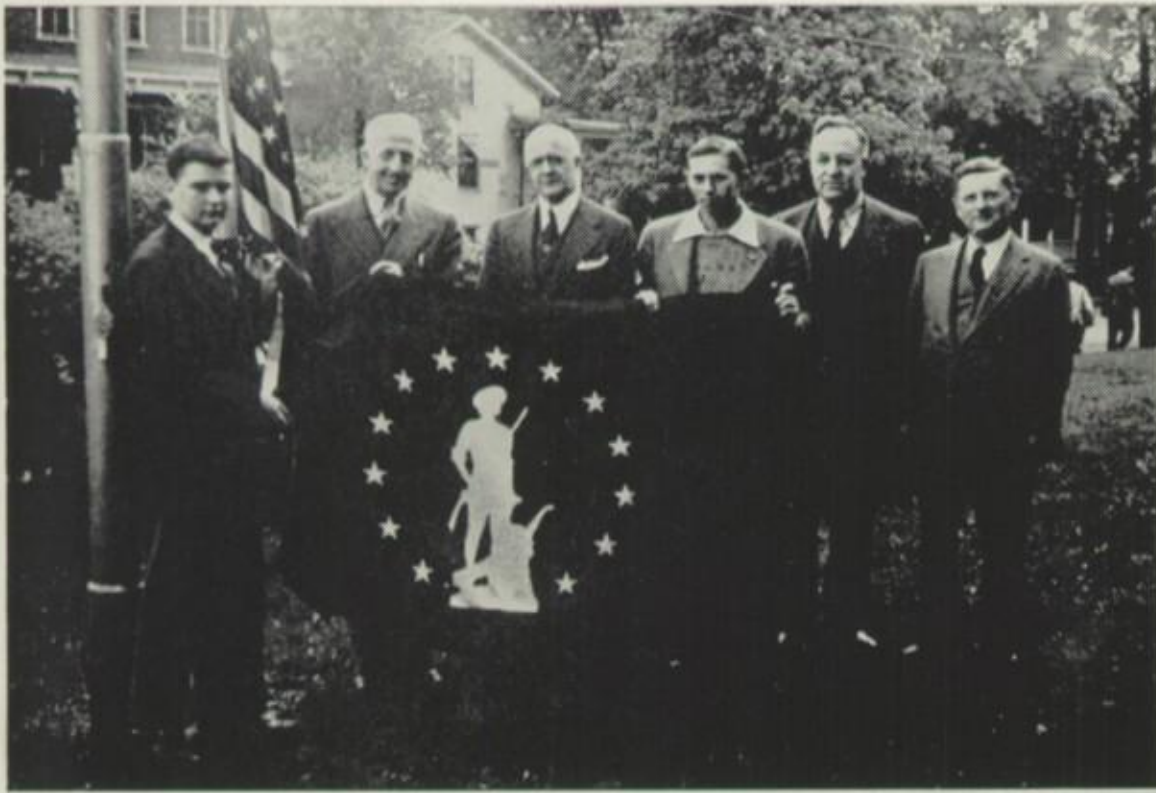

Library, Music, Dramatics—because fighting a war demands wholesome recreation during leisure hours;

Student Council, Junior Red Cross, Geneva Hi-News, and Victory Corps—because they are inclining us toward democratic ideals;

Science Club, Future Farmers, Homemaking, and National Honor Society—for their guidance in training our minds for worthwhile things for the present and the future;

Athletics—for its contribution to the physical fitness part of young America's program.

Victory
 Corps
 Bonds
 $ 83132.50
 Stamps
 1943-1944

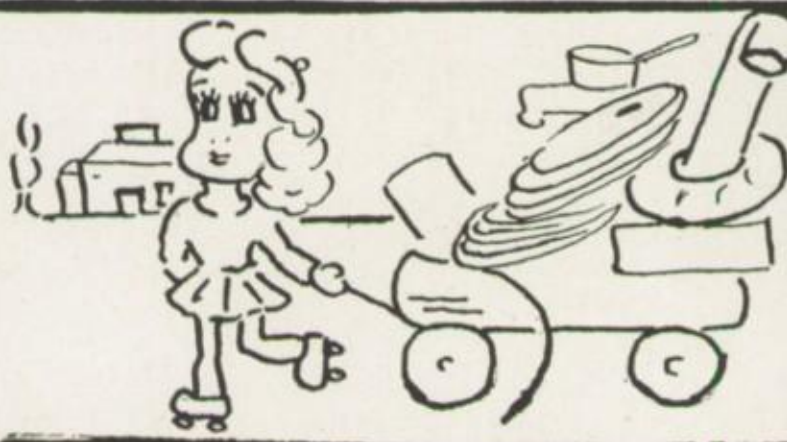

VICTORY CORPS

The Victory Corps sponsored the War Bond Assemblies during this year. The exact amount raised during the drives was $83,132.50.

"A 100 dollar Bond!" was the cry.

Results are good when the Victory Corps takes a hand in the scrap drive.

And don't forget Miss Beard's campaign for cooking fat. She has done a splendid job and her work should be recognized.

Ditto for home safety survey.

The model airplanes used by the aircraft recognition classes of the armed forces are supplied through the skill of the Victory Corps members. Some of these may be viewed in the library.

The mad scramble for ration book No. 4 found the Victory Corps hostesses assisting . . .

at every turn. War work! Machine Shop! V. C. boys and girls hold a good attendance at the defense school on Lewis street. The assistants to the Student Council representatives who sell war stamps every week in the home rooms are . . .

preferably Victory Corps members. The paper shortage and the V. C. members go to work at once to collect the old papers from house to house.

With so many boys going directly into the Army from high school, a program of preliminary training has been established. A student now, a soldier later. The Victory Corps military drill has prepared many boys for the tough Army life ahead of them.

A farm crisis! From July to November the hours put in by 278 people are equivalent to the work 42 men could do, working a ten hour day for four months.

"Vocational Agriculture" has a broad meaning. We thought that it would be interesting to know the phases covered in the different years of study. Here they are:

Agriculture I—General introduction to the course covering poultry raising, gardening, shop work and the opportunities provided by the study of agriculture.

Agriculture II — Major emphasis on crops, soils and fertilizers, also covering feeding and management of a laying flock, and tree fruits in respect to culture and the control of diseases and insects.

Agriculture III—Major emphasis on dairy cattle feeding, and production and milk testing, including work on hogs, horses, sheep production and berries and bush fruits.

Agriculture IV—Farm management and economics. Actual study of farm business, records, and accounts, including prices, costs, income taxes, etc.

This year a Science Club was organized in Geneva High School. The club has a membership of about twenty, with Mr. Robert Moore acting as advisor. At the first meeting, a constitution was drawn up, and officers were elected. Meetings are held twice each month and consist of a short business meeting followed by a scientific program. The purposes of the club are: 1. To increase our knowledge of science. 2. To learn to perfect our skills in science. 3. To give service in our community and nation. 4. To understand the importance of science in our lives. 5. To help carry out the program of Science Clubs of America.

Our government needs skilled workers and these Science clubs are helping to produce such workers, for they are developing a scientific attitude, especially with regard to recent achievements in their special field of interest.

The scientists of today that are doing such a grand war-time job, are the products of former high school clubs. The scientists of the post-war era will be those who now belong to these clubs. Science is today winning the war for us, and in the future it will make our life much more comfortable. The right to discover the truth ourselves is one of the things for which we are fighting.

The dictionary defines scholarship as "learning of an accurate, sometimes academic, always schooled and disciplined sort" . . . In school, the student not only studies many practical subjects, but he also develops a sense of being orderly and accurate, which is the core of scholarship, according to the dictionary. To be all-around, a person must be systematic—that is, get work done on time, and budget time so that he has time not only for work but also for recreation, and other important parts of an all-around existence. The punctual person is always admired, but no one likes the one who is never on time.

The necessity for accuracy is becoming more evident all the time. No one is all-round who is not accurate. One of the most striking examples of the importance of accuracy lies in the artilleryman who must fire his guns at the enemy and not miss. In civilian life, accuracy comes in at such places as counting change and being at a conference at 2:00 and not 3:00.

The disciplined mind also is universally esteemed. A person may be scholar'y without having had any "book-learning." A mechanic has an orderly idea of how a motor is assembled, and, although he has not learned his knowledge in a school, this knowledge is "filed away" so that he can draw upon it with no hesitation or uncertainty. A scientist covers so many fields that if he did not remember his information systematically, he would lose it in the shuffle of molecules, magnets and microscopes. The business man must remember things in orderly fashion, too. If he is working on several projects at the same time, he must be able to remember the details and keep the details of one project separate from the details of another. The disciplined mind is also able to concentrate when there are others around and to finish his task on time in spite of disturbing interruptions.

Election to the National Honor Society is based upon character, service, leadership and scholarship, but not on scholarship alone. Thus a bookworm stands no chance at all; the Society welcomes the all-around person, whose scholarly traits have developed not only good marks, but also a sense of order, essential to a leader, and a sense of accuracy, essential for every good public servant.

Through the untiring efforts of "Doc" Bonesteel, who is in charge of the health program a set-up has been achieved in the grade schools by which our younger brothers and sisters are taking the first step in a graduated system of physical development. In high school the scope of athletic activities is broader than in the grades. Individual skill is encouraged in that part of athletics that includes such sports as tennis and track, where the competition is among the individuals as well as among the teams; whereas, in the type of sport exemplified by football and basketball, the emphasis is less on the person and more on the team working as a unit against an opposing unit.

A recently developed phase of the physical education course is swimming. There are no pictures of swimmers in the "Seneca Saga" because Geneva High at present has no swimming team, either boys or girls. Realizing the necessity of acquiring aquatic abilities, our school officials have this year instituted a campaign the slogan of which is "Everyone who is physically able shall be a swimmer."

The physical education courses have been improved in such ways as having full-hour gym periods, more instructors, and a program of wider range in keeping with the general trend toward complete physical development.

The Junior Red Cross has as its motto—"I serve my country." The Geneva Chapter of the Junior Red Cross lives up to this motto.

Geneva High School has undertaken many important projects this year. The Homemaking Department made four children's dresses to be given to the school nurse to distribute at Christmas time. Fifty wash cloths and eight pairs of knitted bed socks were sent to Red Cross Area Warehouse at 300 Fourth Avenue, New York. Our members also made 200 newspaper bedside bags for patients in U. S. Naval Hospital at Sampson, New York. We also sent to Sampson candy, 150 nut-cups, and 50 lapboards which the boys made in the shop. The blind were not forgotten this year because the Junior Red Cross sent a subscription for the Braille edition of "The Reader's Digest." We also shared in the happiness of two inmates of the Ontario County Home by taking several gifts and a subscription to "The Reader's Digest" and "Woman's Home Companion" to them. Our art department made 100 original designs for Naval Christmas menu covers and reconditioned 1000 Christmas cards for the Veterans' Hospital at Bath, New York. Our parochial and public elementary schools contributed several tons of waste paper to the salvage campaign.

All of these projects have been very worth while and are carried out with the spirit of "Service" which has been the determining factor in achieving success. The Junior Red Cross members are always ready "to serve" and are preparing for greater opportunity in the service which awaits them in the future.

JACK NORMAN, President.

These boys are the ones who set up all scenery on the stage before a show. Furthermore, they have charge of the microphone when there is a speaker; and, they help set up the movie projector, screen, and other equipment when a movie is shown. These boys must be sure that lights do not glare and that sounds do not echo when a show is being given.

"Best Foot Forward" JOHN CECIL HOLM

Ever since history began, drama has been an ever-present factor in the life of mankind and, in the present chaos of the world, it is playing an increasingly important part in our lives.

Because of the mental strain under which we are living in this precarious age, people are becoming more and more conscious of their dramatic interests and are frequently finding their interpretations to be inadequate.

Here in our high school, we are striving to develop an appreciation of real drama in lieu of the common war-time hysteria. Whenever the Dramatics Department presents a show of any kind, the students develop, for they study the problems of characterization, staging and financing. Students are encouraged to use their own initiative whenever possible, but are taught to respect the advice and teachings of those who know.

Because plays present ordinary, everyday happenings, a serious study of the drama helps to make a well-balanced individual. A student who is analyzing other persons and their actions will not be starry-eyed; he will be a realist with both feet on the ground. The conclusions he draws from this interchange of ideas prepare him for the intelligent criticism of the contributions of others in this field.

Jack,
How you can laugh in geometry is more than I can figure out! I'm scared to death all the time. Well, let's hope we pass!
